The poor woman suffering frightfully from this diabolica treatment, was sent to bospital, where she will have to remain a month to recover from her injuries. The husband treated the nffair, in Court, with the utmost no nelulance, and claimed a perfect right to torture his wife a notion which we believe a certain class of Ohinese very generally hold. The Magistrate, however, vehemently expressed his detestation of the man's conduct, and ordered him to be imprisoned till she recovered, to pay the bospital expenses, and to be afterwards further dealt with. DISGRACEFUL BURIAL SCANDAL. If "cremation" should ever be substituted for interment there will at least be no more 'burial scandals" such as that which, accord ing to the Bradford Observer, has just occurred at Barnoldswick, near Skipton. It seems that the row began, when the vicar refused to bury parishioner in a grave dug by the sexton in portion of the ground in Gill churchyard which had through long use become too full, and for interments in which a prohibitory fee had been imposed which the relatives of legensed either could not or would not our The coffin containing the body was deposited in the church, where it was allowed to remain, and on the Sunday morning, when the vicar was returning home after conducting divine service as usual, he was mobbed by a crowd several thousand people, who hooted him and pelted him with mud. The reverend gentleman vas, however, evidently prepared for emergencies, for he suddenly produced a six-chambered revolver, the sight of which produced a calmer spirit in his faithful flock, and, it is stated, probably prevented further violence." The whole story is not a pleasant one. It is, no doubt, perfectly right to discourage, if not absolutely prohibit, burials in overcrowded graveyards; but it is hardly a becoming act in parishioners to pelt their pastor with mud or

The defendant had remembered this trivial incident of his early days. It was singular, perhaps, that he should remember things thus trivial and forget mutters of real importance. But the fact was " a mental phenomenon"-" and few people, gentlemen, added the learned doctor, "understand such a complicated organ as is the human And so from Mr. Henry Welsh the learned counsel passed to Mr. Thomas Parker, Guy," the labourer on the Tichborne estates; as Baigent had been spoken of as " a one-eyed man," with the sole view of insulting him; and

and from him again to Mrs. Ann Welsh, to whom young Roger used to apply for mils and him, and, therefore, did not hesitate to put scrows; and from her to Lillywhite, who had him in the witness-box. been spoken of as "a one-legged man," exactly from Lillywhite, ugain, to Charlotte Holder, the ex-charwoman at Tichborne House. All these witnesses had unhesitatingly identified the defendant as Roger Tichborne. Was it reasonable-was it even likely that they were all elight-not much more than a million on a to mistaken P Was it not more rational to hold tal exceeding 250 millions; and we might t that they spoke from innate and well-founded disposed at first to treat the decline as too small conviction. Then, too, there was Ann Noble, to merit serious attention. But there are two HATS, in Felt, Velvet, and Straw. and with her her husband, Henry Noble the reasons why it cannot be neglected. The first is bailiff of Tichborne. Mrs. Stubbs had identified the but there is no reason to believe the production defendant, and had more especially been struck has as yet been sensibly increased. Our best by his recognition of an old family picture hope lies in the fact that the export of iron anging up in her houses. It had been sug. continues to diminish, for it is now well undergested, with reference to the defendant's know- stood that it was through the more ledge of this heir-loom, that Mr. Guildford for iron that the demand for coal outstripped Onelow had been at work getting up evidence, the supply. pumping witnesses, and coaching the defendant. "It is really too bad," cried Dr. Kenealy, indignantly, "to have these constant insinuations levelled at a gentleman like Mr. Guildford Onslow; and poor Mr. Onslow must often quake in the morning, when he looks into the papers and contemplates Mr. Hawkins's latest discoveries." The learned counsel next touched upon the evidence of William Hall the blacksmith, and of Powell the music master, whom the defendant had recognised at once, saying, "Halloa, this is Powell, isn't it?" Next Mr. William Mansbridge, alias "Bill," was touched upon and then came Mary Ann Byles and Eliza Roper; and so Dr. Kenealy made his way to Miss Braine, herself. Miss Braine was, he indignantly asserted, a lady who had been most shamefully vilified, but whom be believed to be as honour able and truthful a lady as any in all broad England. She had given her evidence with seriousness and with gravity. She had perilled her worldly interests by esponsing the defend-ant's cause. But, on the other hand, she had put her trust in God, who never descris those that do right, Miss Braine's evidencewith which the public is already familar-the learned doctor went over in detail, calling attention to the story of how Miss Braine had locked young Roger up in his bedroom when he had, upon a certain memorable occasion, taken more wine than was good for him; how she had remembered the dimpled knuckles; how she had said when she first saw the defendant, "Don't speak; sit still and let me look at you for a few seconds"; and bow she had further said, looking at his hands with their "dimples." " the hands are the hands of Roger Tichborne." Miss Braine had been censuredfor taking charge of the defendant's house. He (Dr. Kenealy) saw no ground for such censure. He remembered the often quoted words of Scott, "When care and anguish wring the brow, ministering angel thou." And, so, after a detuiled examination of Miss Braine's evidence, and a detailed eulogy upon her many maidenly virtues, the learned counsel went on to comment upon the evidence of other witnesses, such as Ann Mines, who had known Roger Tichborne as a young man, and who "thought he was $6021 to $605; Old Patna, $6231 to $625; Old half-silly half his time." "I think, gentlemen," oried Dr. Kenealy, in a tone of grave moral rebuke." that he is whole silly the whole of his. time." Thus hour crept upon hour; four On London.o'clock arrived at last; and the Court adjourned. "I did not (says the writer in the Péleria enter the room on account of the crowd. But I went back next day that might hear from the mouth of the person who saw the vision the words of the Holy Virgin. The Holy Virgin said we were on the eve of a terrible political crisis; it will be brief, and for a time the wicked will seem to have the ascendency. The Holy Virgin spoke only of Paris as likely to suffer from this crisis; she QUEEN'S ROAD & STANLEY STREET said nothing of the provinces. The vision lasted fifty minutes. The person who saw it was teased in a thousand ways, but felt nothing; all the experiments made on her did not disturb her costasy. The number of people daily is incredible; but the dioceson authority is reserved, especially since three weeks ago, on account of revelations of an extraordinary character. affecting the Pope. A country landowner, who has known the person tranced for a long time, asked her in my presence how the advent of Henri V. in 1874 was consistent with Mac-Mahon's appointment for seven years. She was asked if the latter would remain in power for five years? No. Four years? No. Three vears? No. Two years? No. Three months? she smiled and made no reply. It is always so when she is questioned about facts she is not authorized to reveal. The Holy Virgin bas promised other visions, but did not fix the date. The lady seer is very auxious it should not be fixed, as the crowd on the 8th was so great that she does not wish to see it repeated. But she will approprie it (we are ussured) if the Holy Virgin so desires."
